Process	The eggshell lacquer used for the Dot is a precious and delicate finish. In order to obtain the fine white cracked effect, real duck egg shells are used. They are washed and cleaned, baked to extract all dampness and then broken up in small pieces. It is sanded down and lacquered with 18 to 21 coats of clear lacquer to obtain a perfect smooth surface. Depending on the desired finish, the lacquers are clear, amber or black. For darker coloured egg shell, it is obtained through the roasting of the shells to create subtle shades of browns.

Process	The two-tone colour effect on this Dot is obtained through the superposition of hand applied different coloured lacquers, which are sanded between each coat. A minimum of 18 coats of lacquer are required to reach the required effect. This gives depth to the polished surface, where the different layers come through.
